FOREWORD

To analyze and describe the permanently valuable records of the Federal Government preserved in the National Archives Building is one of the main tasks of the National Archives. Various kinds of finding aids are needed to facilitate the use of these materials.

The special list describes in detail the contents of certain important record series. Its form and style are not fixed but vary according to the nature of the records to which it relates. Its distinguishing characteristic is that it goes beyond the general description contained in a record group registration statement and a preliminary inventory and describes records in terms of individual documents, dossiers, or file headings.

In addition to lists and other finding aids that relate to particular record groups, the National Archives publishes some that give an over-all picture of materials in the custody of the Archivist and some that cover records in the possession of other agencies. A comprehensive Guide to the Records in the National Archives (1948) and a brief guide, Your Government's Records in the National Archives (revised 1950), have been issued. More than 40 Reference Information Papers, which analyze records in the National Archives on such subjects as transportation, small business, and India, have so far been published. Records of World War I have been described in the Handbook of Federal World War Agencies and Their Records, 1917-1921, and those of World War II in the two-volume guide, Federal Records of World War II (1950-51). Many bodies of records of high research value have been edited by the National Archives and reproduced on microfilm as a form of publication. Positive prints of some 3,500 rolls of these microfilmed records, described in the List of File Microcopies of the National Archives (revised 1950), are now available for purchase.

INTRODUCTION

The United Nations Conference on International Organization was convened at San Francisco on April 25, 1945, to formulate the Charter of the United Nations as a basis "for a general international organization for the maintenance of international peace and security".¹ The Conference met at the invitation of the United States, on behalf of itself and of the three other sponsoring nations--China, the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, and the United Kingdom. Fifty nations were represented at the Conference. The four Presidents of the Conference, Edward R. Stettinius, Jr., of the United States, T. V. Soong of China, V. M. Molotov of the Union of Soviet Socialist Republics, and Anthony Eden of the United Kingdom, presided in rotation at the plenary sessions. Much of the work of the Conference was done by four commissions: Commission I, General Provisions; Commission II, General Assembly; Commission III, Security Council; and Commission IV, Judicial Organization. There were technical committees under each commission. After the signing of the Charter of the United Nations on June 26, 1945, the Conference was adjourned.

The photographic records described in this special list were made by the News and Features Bureau of the Overseas Operations Branch of the Office of War Information. They are part of the records in Record Group 208, Records of the Office of War Information. The descriptions of the photographs are based on the OWI captions that appear on the photographs. The photographs, referred to in the list as items, are arranged alphabetically by name of delegation (there are no photographs of the Paraguay Delegation as a group) and by other classifications, and thereunder chronologically, except for a few at the end of each group for which no date is given.

Copies of photographs listed in this publication may be obtained from the National Archives and Records Service, Washington 25, D. C., at a cost of 75 cents for each print (glossy or matte finish) no larger than 8 x 10 inches in size. Estimates of the cost of prints of larger sizes will be furnished on request. Orders should be accompanied by a check or postal money order payable to the Treasurer of the United States.
